Course Description

Course Goals

The first goal of this course is to introduce students to classic and contemporary research in social psychology. An underlying theme to this work is that, in most cases, people do not fully appreciate the influence of situational forces on behavior. A second goal is to help students apply social psychology to their everyday lives and to see the world from a social psychological perspective. Thus, when the course has ended, I hope that it will be impossible for you to view your social world in the same way as when the course began.

Required Reading Material

Aronson, Wilson, & Akert. Social Psychology. (8th ed.). Addison Wesley Longman Inc.: New York (ISBN number: 0205796621). If you cannot afford to buy the textbook, a copy is on reserve in the University of Toledo Carson library. Earlier editions of this textbook are not appropriate.

*Copies of the book are best purchased with access to "My Psychlab". My Psychlab access is not required for the course because I did not wish to raise the book price for all. That said, I highly recommend getting My Psychlab with your textbook as it provides many extremely helpful tools such as extra practice exam
